

First Screening is a company specializing in sensor technologies that enable easy measurement of components in bodily fluids. Its flagship product, P-Scan, measures the sodium-to-potassium ratio in urine and is being developed for applications such as assessing salt intake. The company also works on a wide range of sensors beyond human use, including Cat-Scan, a urine analysis device for cats, providing new measurement approaches to healthcare and medical settings.

